Once upon a time to protect and serve, had some sort of meaning weren't just empty words pull me over drag me out whole car searched by ugly cop, no drugs found must let me go my only crime a rolling stop we love cops for their sense of humor, we love cops for their open minds we love cops for most any meal, with a little bit of ketchup and a pickle on the side issue out another ticket making money for the state, making sure we've paid our dues, mustache makes your head inflate making sure we're not suspicious making sure we stay in line,
making sure the coffer's full then charge another parking fine send in another fucking ticket another 80 bucks in debt, six months later in the mail they say i haven't paid them yet ticket enclosed a note upon an angry late upon my brow,
"the fine print, you forgot to sign it, don't forget the late fee now"
