She's the sole creator, she takes the end in her hands she will trust when others scoff she'll bloody up her hands in a laugh she'll warm your anger, anxiousness, and fits she begs your pardon wordlessly as she kisses and she spits she molds the darkness in her hands like a Giant crushing coal and once the diamonds shine she cannot see them anymore she runs out laughing in the rain, and sweats in Summer's scorching sun she leads the lesser men to her, and when they arrive she's done but He bites her cheek and she's surprised they eat the drink and spill the wine they wrestle with their decible they are screams in hot delight he commands his army like a schizo puppeteer he would rather scratch her face than admit to any fear (shhh!)

he'll tantalize the others, just to bask in the effect he still believes in heaven, so he's all obsessed with death she ripped her skirt and felt more free she attracts unwanted idolatry she makes sweet love to her own distress while religion rages in the folds of her dress she's words of acid through charming lips she's Magellan in the bedroom with a Machiavelli twist she is sucking the tears from her lovers' eyes she is lying when she tells you that she'll never lie he licks her toes and she's impressed they wander aimless to the rarest crests they reveal each other's softness like it's the hottest flame in hell and secretly they know that it can never last this well.

he can reek of alcohol and break up with his soul he performs the blackest magic to terrify any and all There's thread around his pinky to remember to forget that he should care for something that he hasn't lost yet.

she applies foundation to remember to forget that she should care for something that she hasn't lost

Dilapidate yourself and darling surely you'll forget that you should care for something you haven't lost yet.
