A voice trembles in the distance.
Your words they hurt my ears.
As it resonates throughout the night skies.
Such convincing repetitions,
As it swallows us whole.
So take your time.

And high above my head,
Resting in the sound.

Will you sing me something than I can understand?
At least anything to ease the thought.
So hold onto what you've got.
Because we gave it our best,
We gave it our all.

I can feel the worst is over,
Comprehended by the eye.
Like a storm, we slowly die.
In the ever-passing moment,
We are further brushed away.
In doubt, we stay.

And high above my head,
Resting in the sound.

Will you sing me something than I can understand?
At least anything to ease the thought.
So hold onto what you've got.
Because we gave it our best,
We gave it our all.

Will you sing me something than I can understand?
At least anything to ease the thought.
So hold onto what you've got.
Because we gave it our best,
We gave it our all.

We gave it our all.
