(Mel Tillis)

Well, how can you have the unmitigated gall
To come back now expecting me to fall
Right down on my knees and kiss your feet yeah feet Feet that one day went a walkin' out on me with a fast talkin'
Slob you hardly knew his name your mind is de-arranged.

And where did you get the backbone and grit
To come back now expecting me to fit
Right back into plans that we once made
Plans that now are gone forever
To return never ever I don't want you anymore
So get away from my door.

And let me live live live and let me live live live
Don't come messing up my life again.

How can you have the courage and the nerve
To come back now expecting me to love
You after the way that you've done me
Guess you think that I'm a fool
But you're the one that's blew their cool
I don't need you anymore so get away from my door.

Live, live, live, live, live, live
Live, live, live and let me live, live, live...
