Jim's been married a hundred years
Though it feels that way sometimes
Three kids and a lovely wife,
They're the reason he survives
A few thousand acres about fifty kilometres from town
A lot of sun and not much rain
But it's like that all round

Oh Jim you work so hard, You work too much You're letting go of your marriage And your kids are growing up

So take the time, to watch your kids
Go climbing that old gum tree
Or running round the washing line
And kiss your wife, she's still the same girl you met that balmy summer's night
I know it can get hard in this busy life
But you've gotta take the time

Well this old place is going well But there's always jobs to do A fence down, sheep to crutch The bookworks overdue And you're wife keeps saying Can't we take a trip to town

Oh Jim drop the strainers Drop the phone What's the point of working hard If you're ending up alone?

Time is money, blah blah blah You need to stop whil you can seem, before you go too far
