Like a man who has two hearts
And both of them worlds apart
And both of them play their part, you know

Like a man who has two wives
His life then becomes alibis
And nobody asks him why you know

Can there be peace
Between the heart and the brain?
No release, always the same
I won't come here again

Like a man who has one hand
Still he does what he can
Shows he is twice the man you are

Like a man who has no hair
It turns out he doesn't care
His eyes though, they show despair, you know

Are we just beasts
With our burdens of pain?
No release, always the same
Cut off my legs, torture and maim
I'm back here again

Like a man who has two hearts
One day they fell apart
And both of them played their part, you know

Can there be peace
Between the heart and the brain?
No release, to try is in vain
Stories repeat, always the same
I won't come here again

Like a man who has two hearts
Like a man who has two hearts
