You, my dear, are as dramatic as a romance
And you're as sincere as a kiss at the drive-in.
Don't breathe a word, it's getting cold.
(Don't breathe a word, it's getting; Don't breathe a word, it's getting cold)
And I told you an hour ago, that it's getting far too late.

Just please go home, I have nothing left to say to you.
You cried but you'll never see me crying;
You tried but you'll never see me trying;
You've gone too far across the line this time.

Oh, Can you hear the sirens they're calling out for you
(They're calling out for you)
I would have tried to save you, but on second thought...

Well come here sweetheart, I'm trying to tell you something.
You are what modern poetry is written all about.

If love is what you're looking for;
Then why do you sleep with the lights off? (x2)

Oh, can you hear the sirens they're calling out for you
(Calling out for you)
I would have tried to save you, but on second thought...

Tear down the stars, Tear down what we used to share
(x4)
You cried but you'll never see me crying;
You tried but you'll never see me trying (x6)
