Mask it right and the cold won't even show
If you're tarnished call this your home
Where all I ask is truth
There's fight left if you choose

I turned a little something into more
When fate knocked down my door
You were standing at both ends
With shoulders cold and

Bare enough
To hold you in
I think I'm it, I know I'm
There enough
To test your sins
I'll taste your grief
I'll let you in

Found my stripes in a glass of water unique
This gentleman pops when he peaks
He's not waiting on holocausts and all the right things
It's the tell tale signs that make you believe
