She's a liar,
But she's always right
And every night, she
Whispers something slowly
But I drift off
Sometimes I know you're awake
As you lay there right beside me
And lay there right beside me
Thinking maybe
You should be somewhere else...
But nowhere in this world
No, nowhere in this world
Will they offer
This at a second glance?
But this won't stand a chance
If you can't just open up

And if it's me, well...
Well, I guess I could change
We said we always could make
The best of anything
Well, here we are now
And things are not what they seem
But every night, I still dream of you
And I can't shake that, no...

Knock, knock, knock on the door
Is it someone you know?
Has he been here before?
No, it doesn't seem to matter cause you always seem
to shatter
The glass that holds our
Innocence, so young...

If there's a chance now
That we could both find a way
Sometimes I think we're afraid
Of what's around the corner
Chasing all these
Empty feelings away
Will only make it better, and only make it better
Well, it happened

And there is so much to change
I guess that we're both to blame
For all these conversations
That have made us
Start to throw this away
Again, I know we can change
If we don't disappear

Knock, knock, knock on the door
Is it someone you know?
Has he been here before?
No, it doesn't seem to matter cause you always seem
to shatter
The glass that holds our
Innocence, so young...

Knock, knock, knock on the door
Is it someone you know?
Has he been here before?
No, it doesn't seem to matter cause you always seem
to shatter
The glass that holds our
Innocence, so young...

So young...

Knock, knock, knock on the door
Is it someone you know?
Has he been here before?
No, it doesn't seem to matter cause you always seem
to shatter
The glass that holds our
Innocence, so young...

Knock, knock, knock on the door
Is it someone you know?
Has he been here before?
No, it doesn't seem to matter cause you always seem
to shatter
The glass that holds our
Innocence, so young...
