The Riddle Prince

Me, I need no royal introduction

Let the rags speak for themselves, but listen all the same:

For me to leave my cares and lose control was something I adored back then

But far too fast their whispers ripped to twisted roars

Black magic, lipstick, this bliss is killing me slowly (so slowly)

If only you could see what I've become

Please take the night away, please take the day away

The stars are fading and it won't be long now

So riddle me this

All my questions never finding voice

All these questions in silence

Black magic, lipstick, this bliss is killing me slowly (so slowly)

If only you could see what I've become

Please take the night away, please take the day away

The stars are fading and it won't be long now

No, it won't be long now

Why won't you follow me?

Why do you all betray me now?

Black magic, lipstick, this bliss is killing me slowly (so slowly)

If only you could see what I've become

Please take the night away, please take the day away

The stars are fading and it won't be long now

Drawn to the cracks in the attic floor

I, I don't think I'm breathing now

Just hid my face but I do recall

A smile as the lights started flickering out

Flicker out
