So you packed up and left town unannounced.
You left a note by the door that said you've gone away.
And you said that the girl that we all thought we knew,
Was just in our heads it was never you.
And you said I'm sorry just don't miss me tonight.

Well this time it's over and you will give in.
And it's gotta be someone till we see you again.
So I'll teach myself to never let you down.

And for every word I wished I had said,
There's another minute where I died instead.
It's the fact that you were gone that started to kill me.
Christmas is coming and you won't be there,
To feed me your lines and claim to still care.
Yeah, I've heard it before so don't think that I would forget it.

Well this time it's over and you will give in.
And it's gotta be someone till we see you again.
So I'll teach myself to never let you down.
Never forget the lessons you've learned,
And I won't forget all the sparks that we burned.
Counting stars in the backyard,
Morning came too soon.

I've miss my New York nights.
And I promise that this time we'll be just fine.
And all I really wanted was for you to hold me.
I've miss my New York nights.
And I promise that this time we'll be just fine.
And all I really wanted was for you to hold me.
Won't you hold me?

Well this time it's over and you will give in.
And it's gotta be someone till we see you again.
So I'll teach myself to never let you down.
Never forget the lessons you've learned,
And I won't forget all the sparks that we burned.
Counting stars in the backyard,
Morning came too soon.
