I've gotta face things from the moment I found out the truth the truth just made it worse it's so easy to be convinced that nothings wrong when you're so young The question is not who's falt it is it's who will get the house I didn't know any better then at least I know now That I'm one of those many people who's parents are divided I remember when I was nine or so that I found my mom crying Mom, when is dad coming home? Why is he so late? I saw him going down the road, He was with another girl. You know, Miss what's her name? Why do you look so sad? things have got to change. You Just can't let this be. You Just can't let this be. I've gotta shake it. From the moment I found out the news that they would break it off. it's so easy to be convinced that nothings wrong when you're so young I wanted to say something but I couldn't make a sound. they fought for days in so many ways until finally she gave out. She locked herself int he bathroom Maybe there she'll find the answer from God. Mom, when is dad coming home? Why is he so late? I saw him going down the road, He was with another girl. You know, Miss what's her name? Why do you look so sad? things have got to change. You Just can't let this be. You Just can't let it be. You just can't let this be.
