Savouring the dusk of dreams
The bittersweet evasion of the pain of awakening Oh why are those golden meadows
so enticing?
Yet I know that I must surrender
To the insomniac dawn
And I know That I must return to the shell of my earthbound spirit

Savouring the truth inside
The bittersweet evasion of the pain of remembering
Oh why are those golden meadows
so enticing?

Frozen in time - a gift from above Or just another moment closer to the end
Another way to tear myself open

Where is home and who to believe?
Where's this road leading?
Is it just fate that I am thrown from the depths of the Earth to bare mountain tops?

And maybe I'm the fool for taking my own path Well I walk alone if I must But maybe one day I'll find my own golden meadows amongst those words
I thought would fade in time But now I know: they've become what I am... and they'll just scream and never leave me again They'll be mine forever, unforgiven...
