I woke up in bed last night when something came upon me

I was not lying by myself but I've never felt so lonely Something's come between us, girl, feels like we hit a wall

And how can I know just how you feel when we don't touch at all

This no communication thing is quickly growing old This isolation booth I'm in is dark and turning cold
I used to steal your breath away with just one little kiss Me and you, we were so in love back then but that's not how it is

I'd catch moonlight in a bottle if we could drink a toast to happiness

Fill my pick-up bed with roses and back it right up to your door

I'd write your name in candy kisses from here to Carolina

If you change your mind and love me like before but that's not how it is

And I have tossed and turned and rolled it over in my mind

Not knowing all the questions makes the answers hard to find

I think I've covered everything but still there's something that I've missed

I used to read you, baby, like a book but that's not how it is

I'd catch moonlight in a bottle if we could drink a toast
to happiness

Fill my pick-up bed with roses and back it right up to
your door

I'd write your name in candy kisses from here to Carolina

If you change your mind and love me like before but
that's not how it is

You know I'd write your name in candy kisses from here to Carolina

If you change your mind and love me like before but
that's not how it is Oh, no, that's not how it is

As I woke up in bed last night when something came upon me
And I've never been so lonely, that's not how it is
