That swan could swim for forty miles
Dishing out a hundred thousand smiles
And he knows to get what he wants he's gonna have to look in the wild
She'd your baby grey feathers don't act like a child meanwhile

Swimming so anxiously amongst the tallest trees
Disregarding all the others because they only have

Hopeful is drawn in like moths to a supernova
He won't be happy will be sober when it's over
That swan will never seek a replacement, another
Because that town has presented a five leaf clover

Swanning around the town amidst a summer breeze
Disregarding all the others because they only have

That swan would swim the river Nile
As long as it would be worthwhile
And he always keeps a clover hidden somewhere underneath his wings
She'd your baby grey feathers and no one's gonna hurt your feelings

Not showing his feathers it's ok because he's Disregarding all the others because they only have

Hopeful is drawn in like moths to a supernova
He won't be happy will be sober when it's over
That swan will never seek a replacement, another
Because that town has presented a five leaf clover

Swimming so anxiously amongst the tallest trees
Disregarding all the others because they only have

Swanning around the town amidst a summer breeze
Disregarding all the others because they only have

Hopeful is drawn in like moths to a supernova
He won't be happy will be sober when it's over

That swan will never seek a replacement, another
Because that town has presented a five leaf clover
