Late one summer evening when I got that dreadful call,
The voice on the other line was crying in hysterical
Once they found her lying next to the bed
I sat right there
I tore up all the pictures,
Thought back and realized I didn't care

Don't tell me why it's hard to find
Trust in someone else's eyes
When the past fades to gray,
Question what you ask and find a way

Late one summer evening when I got that dreadful call,
The voice on the other line was crying in hysterical
Once they found her lying next to bed
So many things were left unsaid.
Feelings grow, or do they?
Can't stop me, I'm letting go.

Don't tell me why it's hard to find
Trust in someone else's eyes
When the past fades to gray,
Question what you ask and find a way

Don't tell me why it's hard to find

Don't tell me why it's hard to find
Trust in someone else's eyes
When the past fades to gray.
