You're bound to think that I'm on the shore From a sea that never came Now's the time to find the time I've done what has to be done

Voices call the nameless one Crying all of the time Tales of no-one in my sleep Stepping out into the night

But you said you saw Medusa The one with the head of fire But the legend of Medusa Lies in the devils sights

I've got myself to blame Through talkin' to ya' brother Too late to say I'll stay Too late to say I'll bother Take out your tongue and speak A friend you ought to keep Fading forces bared Now wake before you sleep Ya' said you saw Medusa She was looking down on you But the legend of Medusa Soon be with you

You're bound to think that I'm on the shore From a sea that almost came There's no time to find the time I've done what has to be done I've done what has to be done I have done

I have done

I have done

I have done

I have done

I have done

I...

I have done, I have truely done

I...
I have done, now I have truely done, now I've got to find a way home
Take a good look at my face
Oh
There is no more
