Crucify my mind, but always know you'll never find,
Ideas so set in my gone blind.
Separated from a color, just to live a life of fuller knowing,
Understanding why glass breaks.

And you know that I can't, live another moment,
Always knowing I'll never reach you,
Always understanding, never reprimanding,
Always knowing I'll never reach you.

How can I be like you, in spite of me,
How can I see like you do right beside of me,

Always trying on my own but tripping falling long the way,
Losing sight of what comes next,
Smashing everything held sacred, scatter harmless
waves of gray,
Sharpened as the dust collects.

And you know that I can't, live another moment,
Always knowing I'll never reach you,
Always understanding, never reprimanding,
Always knowing I'll never reach you.

How can I be like you, in spite of me,
How can I see like you do right beside of me,

Time is ending oh so quickly, bringing back what's lost
and gone,
Hope is yet a stone and rope,
Lost at sea never to return, eyes of sparkle seldom lead,
Back to you I start to run.
