I know that you have reasons for your expectations,
She says as she walks out the door,
I fear that nothing comes of this and that her anger
grows with time,
Up in the cold, contagious world.

And she feels that I always knew,
But was just too concerned with you,
Wrong visions flared across her mind,
And so with time, I'm left behind.

Pat on my back, slap in my face, what will it be?
Make up your minds one at a time, stop tempting me!

It puts a smirk across my face to see two different sides of you,
Your pleasant smile your twisted ways,
I see you never want to change and that you can't control me now,
So stay with me or go your way.

And she feels that I always knew,
But was just too concerned with you,
Wrong visions flared across her mind,
And so with time, I'm left behind.

Pat on my back, slap in my face, what will it be?
Make up your minds one at a time, stop tempting me!
