And her face it floats just like a dream.

Through the light of shining memory,

And it's always the same one she says I never remember.

September, a plane took me away.

Across the states to a seaside coastal bay.

With quiet conversations completed through computer screens.

I can always say that I will never fall away.

I've got myself attached to stay, with a safety net in
place.

And your heart, it holds me here as I

And I feel your love is near, as it always is.

And the phone rings, with seven hours in between.

A hang-up and a smile.

A motor whirls on an escalator as it carries me down,

To where I'm not recognized.

I can always say that I will never fall away.

I've got myself attached to stay, with a safety net in
place.

And your heart, it holds me here as I

And I feel your love is near, as it always is.
