A brand new song another blank sheet of paper
So many things left I need to write down and express About this loss that I can't accept About these haunting thoughts that I can't escape
About this best friend I always had on my side
And I never thought would commit suicide

That decision you made to turn off the light
And say goodnight in silence has left an undelible
mark
This pain would justify a hundred songs a thousand lines
But still none could get the feelings right

I am staring at those pictures that I'm holding tight in my hands today
It's such a hard thing to face to live these days
That ever since have faded to the darkest grey Our days of innocence have been stolen there's no turning back on the way of our lifetime

And say goodnight in silence has left an undelible
mark
This pain would justify a hundred songs a thousand
But still none could get the feelings right
And say goodnight in silence has left an undelible
mark
