Evening fades away
Another page to turn the corner
And gently put away
To sleep and wake another morning
And you are standing there with your long hair
Along your shoulders, along your shoulders
The desert treats you well it's hard to tell
You're getting older, a little older
And so the many years have taken toll
And you're beside me even though
Here to face another day
The sun has given wrinkles to your skin
The years we'll never see again
I pray to God don't let them end
Stars, the lonely lights
The desert night falls around us
A lies upon this sand
Woman and man still undivided
And you are standing there with your long hair
Along your shoulders, along your shoulders
The desert treats you well it's hard to tell
You're getting older, a little older
Sundown on the desert
Coyote calling ooh
Here's to me and you together
Our love is strong, hanging on for all these years
And so the many years have taken toll
And you're beside me even though
Here to face another day
The sun has given wrinkles to your skin
The years we'll never see again
I pray to God don't let them end
Don't let them end
Don't let them end
