I met an old man today
Standing on the street
Wearing a sign that read:
"This is my last day alive"
So I stopped to ask
If in his long life,
There was anything that he regretted

And he spoke to me words I will never forget

He said,

"I've lived my whole life
knowing one day I'll die,
and that it's alright, oh but it's alright
And if you are wise,
You'll take my advice
And you'll do alright
Yes you'll turn out fine"

Oh, he said "life is just a phase
You can only get out what's put in
And it's over in a blink
So why not give everything
Boy are you listening?
It won't be repeated man,
And this is the meaning of life"

Saw an old friend today
Standing in the rain
Wearing a ring that she did not have the last time we met
So, out of concern I
Stopped to ask her why
She'd betrayed solitude
Her attribute I'd most admired
Then she spoke to me words I will never forget,

She said,

"I've lived my whole life

hoping one day I'd find
