You think in such unlikely ways to whisper out your careful phrase Never ending verse arrives divided into many lives

Show me where to put my ear
so other voices disappear

My face keeps tilting toward the sky for the fire I should recognize What burning there became my kin which ember do I have within

Show me where to point my eye and see your face in each surprise

I touch a few and still betray what you would have my heart survey I should move as far and wide as the strangers that I sleep beside In dreams I usher in unfamiliar eyes and skin

Show me how to spread my soul
Show me where to point my eye
