A silhouette, I focus out Delicate ear, I am a shout
The cadence of a slow, deep breath
I never pause to fill my chest
A patient dream that wants to rise
I will not close more than one eye

Whatever rhythm I begin there is another joining in a Dream that wants to rise I will not close mere than one eye

Shadows pulse to draw the spark an arm of fire feels for dark Threads of light arrange to rope frames combine kaleidoscope Sleep decides it will unfold but fear designs an awkward hold

Whatever rhythm I begin
there is another joining in but Sleep cannot unfold fear designs an awkward hold

The patient Dream wants to rise
I will not close more than one eye
Sleep decides it will unfold

there is another joining in
there is another joining in
