I've walked seven hours since the break of dawn looks like I ended up here on your front lawn maybe I was lonely, maybe I was blue maybe I couldn't sleep til I talked to you spent the day thinking about what it all means new cars credit cars, movies and magazines nothing is lasting, we'll leave it behind doesn't matter what's yours or what is mine but maybe there's some truth to these lines chorus - setting suns and morning showers they don't last all day everyone, like every flower soon will pass away

even this guitar that I hold in my hand was once in the trees, the earth, the sand and when it goes back there, back from where it came it will still have life, but a different name and maybe for you and me it's the same chorus

bridge - winter is cold but the sun is knocking on the door the young, they get old and the rich will soon be poor see, i had a friend who let me down blowing everybody else's money all over town forgiving your debtors forgiving their debts it's like forgiving yourself for your regrets it's like forgiving the sun each time it sets
