LUCK - Paul Weller/Mick Talbot

Luck fell in the right place for me

The day you happend to come by -

You caught me feeling all was useless

And left me feeling ten feet high

Now nothing again will be quite the same

You gathered my fears and threw them away

Luck dropped in just at the right time

The time when I felt most alone -

All my dreams had seemed to vanish

Now my nightmares have upped and gone

I'm not scared of farewells, nothing's the same twice

I stride through the day and I float through the night

How much choice do we have in this?

Like some almighty hand smashing your life into pieces

One day you're washed and drowned -

And the next minute you're put back on land

Now nothing again can be quite the same

I gather my fears and I throw them away

Luck - when you hold me closely

Ooh - feels like summertime

Luck - when you hold my hand

I - want it all the time

Luck - in your country kisses

Ooh - I love your outlook

Luck - in your hills and valleys

Go on talking my babbling brook
