On a park bench in September
The exact words
I don't remember but you gave me your premonitions
A set of rules and some conditions

And you said that this was the only way we'd work and not be lonely
And I feel like we were broken but we'd be here because we'd chosen

My heart cried out what I was thinking
That we will be alright for a while

I still feel like words were draining
I was cold and it was raining How had we in just an instant now become so very distant

And my heart cried out what I was thinking
That we will be alright for a while

And as the church bells start to chime I knew we were running out of time
So I agreed to all you asked me for 'cause I couldn't take it anymore

My heart cried out what I was thinking
That we will be alright

My heart cried out what I was thinking
That we will be alright for a while
For a while
