Remember that old feeling
The one deep in your heart
The anguish that lacks healing
The one that kept us apart

What a fool I was for you
Too long we've been living a lie
Our love can't even be true
Too many times I've felt to deny

Looking for stories of sea and sky
An edge of reason to keep me going
After seeing that strange mark I wonder why
What is the love to be that I keep showing?

Memories humming at the heart
Of a middle-aged town
Like a dream of the open ocean
Swimming out to sea
And never reaching the unreachable end
The destination doesn't exist
It's still our time

I was staring at the open ocean
Repeating the echoes of the sea
With the moonlit water on a rise
What a fool I used to be

The wait of a sunrise is not for the set
These boundaries replay in my mind
The same scene I imagined when we first met
Seemed too well as if I had been blind

Memories humming at the heart
Of a middle-aged town
Like a dream of the open ocean
Swimming out to sea
And never reaching the unreachable end
The destination doesn't exist
It's still our time

There's always a catch

Those are the words you claimed to me
And I believed them
For better or worse, I thought.

The sun is the darkest
At the end of the night
Where leaving from sunrise
Or when the full moon is bright

Memories humming at the heart
Of a middle-aged town
Like a dream of the open ocean
Swimming out to sea
And never reaching the unreachable end
The destination doesn't exist
It's still our time
