[Incomprehensible]

In the morning we will wake up and take to the air
Look back at the planet, I'm glued to my chair
Southern half is burning as we climb through the sky
Sea birds softly falling, smoke way up high

There's the contours of the mountains, the deserts and plains
And a hurricane is blowing and it turns once again
Now there's oil spills in the water, where Columbus once sailed
And there's history and mystery and it's rolling away

I wish you could see, this great mystery

Earth and sun and moon, human tribe, thin blue line
Earth and sun and moon will survive, yeah

Sediment is flowing from river to sea
Now where are the mighty nations, no lines to be seen
An axe upon the broken ground, the sigh of the trees
And it's floating in the ether, it brings me to my knees
Oh yeah, yeah

Too messed up to care, got a wing and a prayer

Now, earth and sun and moon, human tribe, thin blue line
Earth and sun and moon will survive

In the blink of an eye, thank you and goodnight

Earth and sun and moon, human tribe, one thin blue
line
Earth and sun and moon will survive

Earth and sun and moon
Well, it's the one and only tribe, we will survive Earth and sun and moon will survive, will survive, will survive
Oh, yeah
