

The Midway State "Fireflies"

Visit "Fireflies" on MotoLyrics.com

did you feel the nurse at night?
She stroked and held your hand.
Did you feel the doctors might?
He cried; you understand?
That everything ain't always right,
oh hell, it never is.
You are going to die tonight,
like all your parents did... the way they did.
Remember the morning breeze on your face when
you're crying.
Tell me you don't want to leave
though you're so old and tattered on this night.
Well think about the times we've shared,
the moons shined so bright.
Think about the love we shared,
a love that over ride.
Remember the morning breeze on your face when
you're crying.
Tell me you don't want to leave,
though you're so old and tattered on this night.
And if you only knew I doubt that you'd be dying.
I'm such a selfish fool to think that you're not trying... to stay.
Is it over to know that I'm right here and I'm scared tonight that you won't make it. You're losing this fight.
You're burning out right before me. Your million fireflies are burning out and I can't say goodbye. And you're floating along Remember the morning breeze on your face when
you're crying.
Tell me you don't want to leave though you're so old and tattered.
It hurts me loving you, it burns a million fireflies.
It hurts me loving you, it burns a million fireflies.
It hurts me loving you, it burns a million fireflies.
It hurts me loving you, it burns a million fireflies.
It hurts me loving you, it burns a million fireflies.
It hurts me loving you, it burns a million fireflies.
It hurts me loving you, oh, damn you for loving me.

Visit The Midway State page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.
