I met him in my favorite place
Well it used to be until I realised
How crappy it could make me feel
Before the doorman rejected me
He couldn't handle my virginity
But the DJ could
Just before the music turned life into something good

And he asked for my suggestions
Needed my directions
And even though Dr.Martins don't go well with a Lions
Club-tie
He asked if I was hungry, my wallet couldn't speak for me
So I gave him my company
But something made my try to read his eyes

'Course'
I didn't give my self away
No mather how close it may seem
Apart from my presious fate
I didn't give my self away
He didn't take anything from me
Apart from my presious fate
In everyone's honesty

He had money enough to spend
But back home he had a girl
He had me watching his influence
He lied and I listened
Word for word
But calling all the bluffs I heard
I thought would cause me more
Then listening to the decade way of those word

By then I started notesing
The masculine curse
Calculating with my young thirst
He said he had to see me naked first
Then for that part in his movie he could end his search
He had me in mind
I failed to tell him he didn't strike me as being the director kind

'Course'

I didn't give my self away
No mather how close it may seem
Apart from my presious fate
I didn't give my self away
He didn't take anything from me
Apart from my presious fate
In everyone's honesty

I never wanted to be an actress
I can't pretend to cry
I couldn't even ask him why he didn't look me in the eyes
Still my naivity gave it a try
Behinde his hotelroom-door
I could see his real intention rise from across the floor

I wish I'd been younger
That it could has passed as a mistake
I wish I'd been older
Old enough to have him shake
By the way he was Sweedish
He really dwelt in real estate
Well he dwelt enough to see me naked
I should have exposed that with-feathered faker

'Course'

I didn't give my self away
No mather how close it may seem
Apart from my presious fate
I didn't give my self away
He didn't take anything from me
Apart from my presious fate
In everyone's honesty
