Everyday just blows into one.
The moon starts to look just like the sun
Full steam ahead, day & night.
Never fully charged, never quite right.

She was a snowy day
A break from working hard, for such little pay.
She was a snowy day
She let me get some rest
She let me sleep real late
So I could fight another day

Bleary eyed, I drag my feet along
By the time the caffeine hits the day is gone
But she came and gave me time to catch my breath
She shut the city down, no one's left the house yet

She was a snowy day
A break from working hard, for such little pay.
She was a snowy day
She let me get some rest
She let me sleep real late
So I could fight another day

The sun is hidden while my heart
The sky of what is frozen time.
And all responsibilities delayed.
One by one the decks are stacked
With all that modern life can pack
I don't know how much more that I can take
I'm so thankful for this snowy day

A break from working hard, for such little pay.
She was a snowy day
She let me catch my breath.
She let me sleep real late
So I could fight another day

She was a snowy day.
