The center of my universe six thousand miles apart
The journey of the calloused yet ever breathing heart
Day by day I burn in the twilight of her gaze
No entity of fairness could ever be replaced could ever Be replaced

Our stars collide but the stars don't shine
I imagine her in my arms she is frozen our vow's broken

I'll undo this curse the lines that I rehearse
When silence wraps around Hands slowly reach out my loneliness and doubt
I plead for your reply
Will you come back to me in the twilight

The moon covers the sun as she slowly walks away
Results in an eclipse in a comatose of the heart
Those days with her seemed endless and her eyes seemed
So sincere I never thought she would suddenly disappear

Her lips were pale yet soft I'm dying in the cold Your cliché'd lines and withered flowers our story will be told

Without her love my daylight ends
Of whispers and light kisses I shake shiver cry a river
