"The Big Sleep"

I was in the car and you were driving
I was in the car and I told you everything

The good attempts, the big offences, ground principles in the rear view mirror My big mouth, stormy horizon, your hot blood in the rear view window

I'm losing myself, you speed

Silent question marks condensed in your breath Unwanted options going through my head
The big sleep has leather seats and rain on the windshield

No, we had to do what we did. At the wrong time in the wrong place
Waiting in vain for someone else. In vain for someone else
Waiting in vain for someone else to show the way

I was in the car and you were driving

These small depths, these small miracles, new requests brought us in here
The unnamed road ahead, who knows, may lead us nowhere

I'm losing myself, you speed

I can hear you going through my head
The big sleep has leather seats and rain on the
windshield

No, we had to do what we did. At the wrong time in the wrong place
Waiting in vain for someone else. In vain for someone else to show the way

No, we had to do what we did. At the wrong time in the wrong place

Waiting in vain for someone else to show the way

So that was that
