"A Deeper Gray"

["There are times in which we can read in somebody else's eyes things we wish we could never read. If you are any sensible, you can predict these unsaid things. Deeper Gray is the daylight that does not shine. Another day is born, nobody cares about our defeats. Nobody is supposed to, anyway. The chorus lyrics is a desperate person's claim to be abandoned by life. Deeper Gray is when all feelings get out of control. It is almost as if we could die a causeless death, and then, resurrect".]

daylight is closing my eyes for the last time I can barely see what you seek I can barely hear what you speak daylight is coming to end my suffering I can barely live as I lived I can barely cry when I breathe my eyes can see just a deeper gray blood is burning inside of me pain is dancing in front of me lies are laughing at my tears harm is increasing throughout the years so give up on me

shall I now say farewell for our future has been denied for our tears have all been cried the dawn is about to come daylight will bring deliverance and my payback I can barely wait for my last I can barely move from my chair daylight is near me but I can't hear I can barely keep track of time (I can barely hear) I can barely ask what is mine (I can barely hear) my eyes are blurred by this deeper gray

so give up on me
for our lives have done us apart in me

shall I now say farewell for our lives have done us apart the dawn comes so alone all I can see is a deeper gray
