

Veronique Sanson

"Louise"

Visit "Louise" on MotoLyrics.com

I had a friend, he had a name, I saw him last night again.
He looked at me, he was feeling guilty, talking like we
had no memories
No laughing dreams and acting just like two strangers.
Then I knew for sure that he's an empty man.
He's crazy man, he's blind fool.

He left her there with a child to bare.
He knew he couldn't really make it and he had to lie.
But I knew he was ready to do what he had in mind.
Just split fast, deny he had really broke her.
And I knew for sure that he's an empty man.
He's crazy man, he's blind fool.

How did he feel about leaving Louise ? Unconsciously feeling so blue.
How could he kill all those years with Louise ?
She couldn't stand phonies, she wouldn't stand liars at all.

I had a friend, he had a name, we had the same passions burning on.
He looked at me, he was feeling guilty, acting like we
had no memories
No loving dreams and talking just like two strangers.
Then I knew for sure that he's an empty man.
He's lazy man, he's blind fool.

Visit Veronique Sanson page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.