Memories of the past run through my head
I remember her words, "Just move on," she said
Those three words play over and over from my mouth
Then three more words: "I love you!" I shout

"I'll love you forever!" I scream the promise right there
And my promise fills the cold night air
But "just move on" again sounds through my ears
And then I know exactly what I'm doing here

A bright light from behind catch me by surprise
Turning around, I realize that it's a sunrise
"How long have I been out here?" I wonder out loud
But that doesn't matter, because now I'm homebound

She's right - it's finally time to move on
'Cause moving on does not mean that she's gone
Can't believe that took so long for me to see
As tears of joy seep out, I know I am finally free
