All around her there are ripped papers
Unanswered prayers, clarification blurred
She tries her best to find the answers
No one answers, what's happening to her?

Rhyme and reason, tossed out the window
Unanswered prayers, unsolvable riddles
Caught in a storm, caught in the middle
Her own feelings keep her unsettled

Where does she belong, could it be in his arms?
Unanswered prayers, unquenchable alarms
They go off, but she tries to keep calm
Questions explode, they go off like a bomb

All around her there are perplexing questions
Unanswered prayers, unbeatable obsessions
She realizes love can cause so much confusion
Love's so irrational, it doesn't care for reason
