Lyrics: J. Linna

Indispensible hatred combined with tattered souls; a sinister
Derision against all those who are expecting the new millennium.
World war three and the waves of infection have defeated the name of life.
Annihilation of the human selfdestruction is the vision;

My dead mind still can see
My dead mind still can grasp;

Now when my soul levitates towards one of the opened
circles
Into the never touched materia, to begin defenseless in a new dimention.
On my way I catch a climpse of an obvious light, a
summoning,
That will bring away the malefactors that once belonged to the moon.

Desperate screeches imlore for mercy.
Their footsteps forces through the infernal fog.
With closed eyes in hope to regain the past
They dimly see the the fateful fire whose glow pulsates
a shine
That stretches after their expectant and fearful gazes.

The scepticism that in immemorial times has been exercised by Creatures now vanquish in endless punishment.

Now when my soul levitates towards one of the opened
circles
Into the never toucted materia, to begin defenceless in a new dimention.
On my way i catch a glimpse of an obvious light, a
summoning,
That will bring away the malefactors that once

belonged to the light.

There senses no longer can accept the act.

Defenseless you see your own organs collapse.
"drain out the liquid of life"
