(Written by William Stevenson, Ivy Jo Hunter)

Just ask the lonely

When you feel

That you can make it all alone

Remember no one is big enough

To go it all alone

Just ask the lonely

They know the hurting pain

Of losing the love

You can never regain

Just ask the lonely

The young and foolish

Who laugh at love and slowly run away

Confident and sure that fate

Will bring another love their way

But ask the lonely

How vainly a heart can yearn

For losing a love

That will never return

Just ask the lonely

Just ask the lonely

Just ask the lonely

They'll tell you a story of sadness

A story too hard to believe

They'll tell you

The lonliest one is me

Just ask the lonely

Just ask the lonely

Just ask the lonely

Ask me, I'm the lonliest one of all
