My love, my love, I thought about you day and night
When I was driving home to find your window light was on
And you were waiting for me
My love, my love, where were you when the sorrow fell?
Were you busy being someone else who would never love how I do?

And after all you're not half the girl I thought I love
And after all, you're not half the girl I loved
You're not half the girl at all

My love, my love they taught you how to step in line
But they will dress you up and they will make you blind to who you were to be My love, my love I thought I picked you from a crowd But now, you're nothing I can't live without and you'll keep fading away

And after all all you're not half the girl I thought I loved
And after all you're not half the girl I loved
You're not half the girl at all

And after all you're not half the girl I thought I love
You're not half the girl I thought I loved
You're not half the girl at all
You're not half the girl at all
