Mark constellations on your skin
And I will sail by them at night
And carefully I'll map your shores
And know you better than any man before
I'll sail into the gret unknown
And awake by you at dawn

Tell me stories all your own
And know me beter than any man before
I'll take you down I still believe
I'll take you down in history
Sometimes doubt can toss your seas
A fear that I will not withstand,
I'll hang on every word you please
And know you better than any man before

I'll take you down I still believe
I'll take you down in history
Sometimes doubt can toss your seas
A fear that I will not withstand
I'll hang on every word you please
And know you better than any man before
In the casual, non-poetic representation
