If you're ever anywhere around here,
just come back.
I'll give you everything you need this time,,
I promise...
It's not so much the way you hurt me,
it's more the way you make me want to hurt myself.

When you show up it's like a landmine close enough to leave indelible scars adhered to one such impressionable person.
Don't say names.
Protect the innocent.
He sure needs a break.

But, what if everyone's got to get back
just in time to smoke that last cigarette
and you're still lingering around the set,
trying to set me off?

Maybe we could take some time to work this out.
I really think our duties are the same:
make it bearable to be careful with each other's emotions.

But the only way to mine out what you're doing
is for you to envy me.
Then, we can both stay interested.

Oh, Charlena.
Maybe you should write this down so we could get it right next time around.
No, Charlena.
It's not as simple as it sounds to keep your feet
planted on common ground.

If anyone knows you,
I do.
And if anyone can forgive you,
well...I'd try to.

But you keep on doing that thing to me.
It's like you're dragging me down into your disease
and can't you see it's bringing me to my knees.

But what if we could get it all back the same way
it was before you attacked all evidence of decency in me
and left me in the debris?

So, Charlena.
Maybe you could sort this out
and tell me how you feel about it now.
Whoa, Charlena.
Maybe you should just sit down.
I'm not sure that it's worth this, anyhow.
