basically, this is an apology.
i still know what's best for both of us, kid.
we've been through enough.
there's nothing left to prove.
the feeling's mutual, but not exclusive.

alibis are only excuses -
allowances for us to abuse the truth.
the truth is i'm done with them.
you may not ever hear them again.

and still they only fulfill so much until we have to fess up and face the facts
the best we can or live with the consequence... the resulting accident.

Our patience is fading.
consider this courtesy,
if not somewhat evasive underneath
but even if it just thrills my soul,
or it burns another hole,
we've got to let it go
before we can't
so long, you've got to believe that there's something better out there
someone better out there for you than me.

So, there you left me standing to fend for myself forever
but i'm holding up,
i'm pulling through.
i'm not sure what else you expect me to do.
but i won't deny that i'm taking it hard... i'm taking whatever's available to me
You see, that's just the way I deal with grief

since i left you here in our destroyed machine I fear you've grown immune it's the difference between whether you're holding on or you're just holding out.

do me a favor, love
let me go.
let me lose before it's too late to choose.

while your pride is numb,
while your face is still young,
while our hands are still clean,
just wash yourself of me.
