she was all alone
she looked round and around forever searching incessant drudgery
but she had that someone wrapped up in a box sticking pins and needles through the tiny cracks she had someone she owned and it's hard to confess I was that someone and she could care less

she's got (she's got)
a cause (she thinks she has) least I have my address in her stranglehold lived my life around her and I lived my life as I was told had me coming and going and coming and going like a toy turned me from a man into a sniveling little boy
