I wake up in the morning with my arms around my pillow
Then suddenly I realize, I only hold a pillow You're not there, you're not there

I call your name and hear my voice run searching through the hallway
To return alone confirming all I've known for so long I'm alone you're still gone

Still half asleep I stumble to the kitchen for my coffee My footsteps match my heartbeats, funny heartbeats on linoleum
The sounds all wrong you're still gone

The sounds outside reminding me the world won't wait forever
And understanding saves don't stand by empty graves You're on your own all alone, she's still gone
