drag my face through the dirt again,
i know i'm where i belong.
for you're a constant reminder,
of all the rights that i've wronged.
give me the strength to move this mountain,
to block this line of sight.
this was more then i could ask for,
tear down the sky.
black out,
black out,
black out the sky.
sever,
sever these ties.
as you further your tragedy,
to prove to me you're alive.
sooner or later we'll have to choose,
from this,
a new set of lies.
give me the strength to flood this valley,
to wash my hands of you.
this was more then i could ask for,
tear down the sky.
black out,
black out,
black out the sky.
sever,
sever these ties.
so here i stand,
this battered path layed out before me.
and no one said this would be easy,
but it's something i must do for myself.
it's gonna be a long,
a long hard road.
know i will let go.
this time it feels so right to forget.
this was more then i could ask for,
tear down the sky.
black out,
black out,
black out the sky.
sever,

sever these ties.
so hear i stand,
this battered man laid out before you.
and no one said this would be easy,
but it's something i must do for myself.
it's gonna be a long,
a long hard road,
which i will walk alone.
i will walk alone.
