your bright eyes would light me up with talk of hope in days to come these days seem to pass so slow that hope for light's all life's become the distant light strings me along with every passing day I'm here stars burn out with shattered dreams as stars collide in silent screams and without you I've shattered through like fading stars I'm fading too

I hope these days of yours outside our sleepy little Midwest town hold all the things you want in life without me there to hold you down

I hope life is all you've ever dreamed of
