this morning settles over me the stars and I were out all night but they've all sunk into the sky and left a sunrise twice as bright close my eyes and learn to breathe and everything will be alright when darkness collides with the day it helps me understand the light

I watch the sky so I can't see the ground falling out from under me the city burns a hole in me it feels like time is spread so thin so I'll cast out across the stars where life is waiting to begin it puts things in perspective when my veins run with fire
